Relationships are difficult: husbands and wives, parents and kids, bosses and employees, students and teachers, friends and neighbors. It does not matter the nature of the relationship, peril and pitfalls await. Our relationships with others are often characterized by disagreement, impatience, anger, insecurity, jealousy, the list goes on.

And yet in spite of that we are drawn into them; something in us as humans belies the fact that we are made to be with other people, we are made for relationships. If only we could be better, more loving; like Jesus said, "Love your neighbor, as yourself."

Over the next several weeks we will be exploring the building blocks of love found in 1 Corinthians 13. Included here are principles that, as we practice them, will not only change us, but our relationships with those around us.

We're glad you've joined us today! If you need assistance, have questions or just want to say hi, feel free to visit guestCENTRAL in the lobby. You can also learn more about us by visiting us online at chestnutridgechurch.com
